

COMMUNITY SAFETY

Community Vision – Ensure that all families are safe, valued, and strengthened. When families need help they can access programs and services, be treated with respect, and have their opinions honored.

A safe community involves many components, including personal safety, individual behaviors and community infrastructure. Indicators selected to give a snapshot of our community safety are Adult Protection; Child Abuse; Criminal Offenses; Sex Offenders; Sexual Assault and Rape; Domestic Violence and Safe Roads. We also take a look at methamphetamine use as an emerging issue in our region.

Adult Protection

Adult Protection Services support primarily elderly citizens in preserving their health and safety, and in identifying and accessing the resources and services within the community for maintaining self-sufficiency.

Similar to child abuse numbers below, if a concern for an adult’s well-being and safety is documented with area Human Services office, a caseworker will be called to access the situation that led to the concern. Though adult protection statistics primarily involve seniors, these numbers also include persons with disabilities and the general population. Due to the state’s computer system, the type of investigation and age of adult is not included. The trend shows that while the numbers of referrals are increasing, the number of investigations is down.

The State of Colorado also tracks the total number child abuse calls / cases plus those that lead to investigations, which are pursued when there are indications of current child abuse or neglect as defined by Colorado state law. Not all investigated cases are founded. In the region, the numbers are down in all but La Plata County.

Criminal Offenses

Crime statistics provide insight into the safety of a community. Previous Index data looked at total criminal offense rate per 1000 people. Since Colorado Bureau of Investigation data can be broken down by law enforcement agency, this data now reflects actual numbers recorded by individual law enforcement departments. Some of the smaller department’s data are not yet included.

Registered Sex offenders

Convicted sex offenders must register with the law enforcement agency under which they reside, every 6 months or as determined by court order. The Registered Sex Offender list may be requested by any citizen from their local law enforcement agency. The Colorado Bureau of Investigation can also be contacted to obtain lists. The County numbers in the table to the right include registered offenders that reside outside of the municipal areas unless stated differently in the table. Law enforcement provides current numbers but does not track the totals from year to year in a consistent manner. Not all sex offenders have committed crimes in the region, but have relocated. Law enforcement encourages residents and schools to request a list at least annually.

Sexual Assault/Rape

The number of sexual assault calls to crisis hotlines; the number of cases filed and reported; as well as the number of registered sex offenders all provide insight into this issue. Nationwide, sexual assault crimes are underreported and those that reach a courtroom are even less. These trends are true for our region as well. The Sexual Assault Services Organization (SASO), Renew, and the Archuleta County Victim’s Assistance Program provide advocacy to sexual assault victims and their families, regardless of whether an incident is reported to law enforcement. Please note, in the 6th Judicial District, the collection of sexual assault statistics have changed and thus years after 2004 may not be comparable to previous years.

Domestic Violence

State law enforcement officers have a mandatory arrest policy and zero tolerance of domestic violence. This policy, as well as population growth, contributes to the growing numbers in the charts below. However, the two judicial districts in our region have different approaches to reporting domestic violence incidents. The 22nd Judicial District tabulates the number of cases filed, while the 6th Judicial District considers number of incidents and arrests.

Another indicator of safety is the number of traffic accidents.

While the number of accidents in a region reflects population growth and the increasing number of vehicles sharing the roads, accidents are also a function of weather, driver experience, road infrastructure, lanes and signage.

Wildlife collisions continue to be one of the top 2 causes of highway accidents in all five counties. As the population grows, and more drivers are on the road, these numbers are expected to increase.

All of these statistics have been provided by the Colorado State Patrol. Some data is not available *.

Emerging Issue – Methamphetamines

Southwest Colorado's rural nature and other complex factors have made the region susceptible to the production and sale of methamphetamines (meth). Meth is one of this document's Emerging Issues because though data on the exact number of users is not yet available, entities such as Mercy Regional Medical Center, San Juan Basin Health Department, law enforcement agencies, pediatricians, and the county Departments of Human Services document meth in their dealings with citizens. Probation officers in the 6th Judicial District estimate that 28% of their caseload (Nov. 2007) involves current or previous meth users. Archuleta, La Plata and Montezuma county organizations have been concerned enough to form meth task forces to more effectively respond to the problem.

In June of 2007, the District Attorney in the 6th Judicial District hired a consultant to look at the feasibility for an Inpatient Residential Treatment (IRT) for offenders in the criminal justice system. The goal of IRT programs is to help offenders develop skills to avoid relapse and recidivism. About 20 people a year are referred to IRT treatment, and the study shows that numbers need to be closer to 90 for a regional IRT program to be feasible.

Future editions of the Index will develop meth indicators as health and law enforcement agencies refine their reporting processes. Potential indicators could include the number of children removed from homes by Human Services due to meth involvement by family members, and the number of meth crimes committed in both the 22nd and 6th Judicial Districts.
